"TEN POUND TEN."

He's a blacksmith, proud of his lot.
He strikes hard when the time is hot.
The red sparks glow like fireflies winging.
Ten pounds ten can never be got Unless he keeps the anvil ringing.
Strike again,
Ten pound ten!

When working well with iron will, He's ready to foot the grocer's bill.
Good luck from every blow springing.
That is the way the pockets fill.
Money clinks to the anvil ringing.
Strike again,
Ten pound ten!

He strikes for wages, and he gets Money enough to pay his debts, And more, for he keeps his hammer swinging.
Pride and industry spread their nets
In vain, for he keeps his anvil ringing.
Strike again,
Ten pound ten!

His anvil sets every day Awake the sleepers over the way.
And they hear him merrily singing:
"There's time to work and time to play.
Now is the time for anvil ringing."
Strike again,
Ten pound ten!

Amid a shower of sparks he stands,
With a bronzed face and horny hands, Where the sweat of his brow will not come stopping.
The house he built is not on sands.
It is firm as the anvil ringing.
Strike again,
Ten pound ten!

When he grows old and bent and gray,
And long before he may rest and play, The golden age sweet pleasure bringing,
He may hear his happy children say:
"There's time in the anvil's ringing."
Strike again,
Ten pound ten!

CHAPTER XXV.—CONTINUED.

When she thought Johnny asleep, she arose and went into the kitchen.
She did not dare to remain in the room with the child lest he should suddenly open his eyes and see the agony which she felt she could no longer suppress.
There was nothing she could do for her husband, living or dead, except to keep the lamp burning in the window as a beacon, in case, as was just possible, he had been thrown after crossing the gorge, and was now wandering about in the darkness.

But for Johnny she would have set out to follow the road back towards own, hoping to find some trace of her husband, but in doing so and leave Johnny when there was so little chance of any good coming of it, was not to be seriously thought of. She must wait until daylight, and then—when then what could she do? If the rain should cease it would still be days and maybe weeks before any one would be likely to visit the cottage. But this fact did not change matters. There was positively nothing she could do except to wait and keep the lamp in the window burning as brightly as possible.

For many moments she sat motionless, and then stole quietly to the side of her child, whom she found much as he had been for some hours past—sleeping uneasily and with considerable ever. As she was slipping from the deck room again, she heard a noise as if some one were fumbling at the kitchen door in a vain endeavor to find the latch. She listened with a feeling of returning hope, mingled with a horrible, superstitious dread; the latter born of her exalted condition and the terrible dreariness of her surroundings.
The sound continued until she could not be mistaken; it was some one trying to open the door, and who else could it be but her husband? With a feeling of faintness, as if she had suddenly been caught as she was about to drop into a horrible abyss, she hastened to lift the latch. As she did so, a form covered with mud, hatless and with a look of death upon his face and in his eyes, entered. For an instant she did not recognize the form as that of her husband, but when he staggered forward into the light and sank upon a chair, she saw that it was he, and in an instant she was at his side, striving to remove his storm-soaked garments.

"Tell me where you are hurt, Johnny, tell me what to do, quick," she said.
"Are you wounded anywhere, or only terribly bruised by your fall? Tell me quick, so I can help you."

But he only stared at her and made no reply.

"John, John," she cried, now doubly alarmed, "what is it? where is it? tell me, dear. Is it your head that hurts?"

He looked at her so strangely that she thought he must have been crazed by a blow upon the head.

Slowly he raised his hand at last and drew it across his forehead.

"I d'know, Marty," he said, in a hesitating tone, "I reckon—I d'know—exactly what is the matter."

He still sat gazing at her with that strange look in his eyes, as if he was not certain of where he was.

"Mrs. Parsons hurriedly placed the tea-kettle back on the stove, where it lustantly began to sing, and a moment later had a cup of tea prepared. Then she came and put her arm about her husband's neck, paying no attention to his filthy garments, while she held the cup to his lips.

"Drink this, dear," she said, "and then I'll get your wet clothes off and get you to bed, and you will feel better."

He took a sip of the tea and then, looking up at his wife as she bent over him, asked:

"Do you think they'll let us stay till morning?"

And Martha Parsons tried to keep her voice from trembling and make it sound cheerful as she answered: "Oh yes, dear, they said we could stay until morning."

She saw that he was out of his head and knew that the better way was to humor any fancy of his brain, and hoping that if she could get him to bed and apply hot draughts to his person, he might recover his mind in a few hours.

She finally succeeded in undressing him and getting him into bed, where he lay staring at her as she moved about, preparing her hot draughts and placing them upon his head and feet, and across his chest.

Johnny had awakened when his father came, and tried to call him, but being told by his mother that his father had fallen from his horse and was hurt, and that he must keep quiet, he had done so, though his eyes were big with tears, and with the fever, which had come up higher than ever.

Occasionally, as she worked over her husband, chafing his limbs and changing the cloths and vessels of hot water with which she had surrounded him, he would mutter something about "the mortgage," or "the mines," or about "Lacey and Erastus," and once a thought he spoke the names of Jennie and her husband, but she gazed red nothing from what he said of the loss of their home, and supposed that his condition was the result of a fall from his horse, and of being so long exposed to the storm. His limbs were cold and she feared he was going into a nervous chill, and worked with all her might to restore the circulation, but in spite of her efforts he continued to sink. His eyes would close for a few moments and then open again suddenly, but never with any sign of a clear perception of his condition or surroundings, but only to mutter something about "campin'- out," and "the mines," and "the children," until just before day began to break, when he aroused from the behavior into which he was fast sinking, made an effort to rise, fell back, stared about the room, and at Johnny's crib, and then with the wild look in his eyes and upon his face changing to one which showed that he recognized his surroundings, he again sank back upon his pillow and made a sign for his wife to come closer. As she bent over him he strove to speak, and finally said, brokenly:

"Tain't—no—use, Marty. My—my—lead—is—is worked out, and our —our claim's been jumped agin'."

He struggled for breath, his eye-balls turned upward and he choked, but seemed to rally his expiring energies for a farewell message, and added:

"I—I'm goin'—goin' over the range, lo—to stake out a new claim, an' you an' Johnny an'—an' the rest will find —find me waitin' when you come."

A great shiver shook his frame, his breast heaved with a long-drawn sigh, and the spirit of John Parsons had gone ahead to prospect for a home for his loved ones in the other country, of which we know so little and hope so much.

CHAPTER XXVI.

ANOTHER FAREWELL.

Daylight came at last, came slowly, as if it were forced to contend with the unwilling darkness for mastery; and even then the clouds did not lift, or the sun cease its steady down-pour.

Martha Parsons never knew where came the strength that enabled her to close the eyes of her dead husband to continue existence when she had done so. One was dead, and the other lived, and living, however, she was While that life continued, she felt that her strength would go to the end, and beyond that she neither thought nor feared. When his father's spirit took its flight, and afterwards while she was caring for the dead body—struggling out the limbs and finding the man across the breast. John Parsons sat and watched the mother's face word or a cry, but with a look of awe and half of surprise, as if he saw the light of the spirit and understood why and whither it had gone.

And when all was done and the body which he lay had been wheeled into the kitchen, where the fire burned in the stove, gave a little more cheerful look to the room, he still asked, repeatedly, and made no complaint.

His mother found her self wondering if Johnny knew that his father was dead, but could think of no way of certaining without herself. She the information if he did not know, possess it, and this she feared it should cause his spirit to of his father.

"If only we could both go," she the words that kept swelling in her heart, and seeking utterance in her lips. Then remembering that she had written; that if possible, she should come to them, she was born, that she might be able to find her hour of trial, she dared not leave dren. But what was she to do? She could she obtain help to go, or rain might continue for days, and already communication was cut off all who lived below, if she went on the other side of the range, she dared not leave her husband help, even if she could go through the floods. She dared not leave for a few moments, for she was to the stable and then to the mills. She did not wish to not dare leave the child alone for that, but the horses were About noon she made a for herself and tried to eat, but it almost impossible to do so, for she had eaten nothing for twenty-four hours, and it was only by self that she must eat in order to up her strength until help came.

She was enabled to swallow a ing at sea, but could not find the one place in the range where be seen from the kitchen window, she saw no one pass. No one pass the gorge, now a raging, noisy torrent, with a depth and power made forcing it a matter of impossibility. And so the minutes and hours dragged slowly by.

Night closed in early, owing to the darkened heavens, and she lit the lamps, placing one in the room of the dead, the other on a table near cot of the living, and sat down on side of her child to watch him.
That he would die before the morning came she knew, and she would

The construction of the Palace, or both, have frightened the Austrian emperor from Irish soil, it is said, and the benevolent hunt nearer home. In the past at Schenbrunn she has had a splen-ned as a marvel of luxurious decoration.

The architecture is that of the modern renaissance period. Steps of white marble

The Swiss Minister to the United States, Col. Emil Frey, is making tucky, accompanied by John R.

Froctor, State Geologist.

The Republican Postmaster at Newark, O., has excited the utmost indignation in that city by the persistent refusal to drop the office in turning for Vice President Henricks. All Democrats may well ask why such men are retained in office and thus be given an opportunity to show such offensive partianship and malignity. If President Cleveland thought enough of the Presidency to accept it at Democratic hands he should have enough respect for them to make them the recipients of his favor.
If not, why not?

Both houses of Congress met Monday and proceeded to the work of organization. John Sherman having been nominated in Republican caucus; he was elected Vice President. In the House of Representatives John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky and Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, were nominated for Speaker, and Mr. Carlisle was elected by a majority of thirty-nine. Mr. Carlisle will make the same efficient officer he has been in the past. Immediately after organization both House adjourned out of respect to the deceased Vice President.

Senator John A. Logan has surprised the country, or the larger portion of it, by declining the proposed Vice Presidency. We said last week that if he had a spark of pride he would decline the position.
We also said that John Sherman, alias Bloody Shirt, would take it and thank you, too. He has been nominated in caucus and elected by the Senate.

While we have no doubt that his personal pride, to a very considerable degree, kept Logan from accepting the position of presiding officer of the United States Senate, it is also true that in declining he had his mind's eye on 1888, and did not propose to be side-tracked now by those who are likely to be formidable rivals in that year. Black Jack is a politician as well as a statesman—probably more so.

JOHN G. CARLISLE.

He may be Senator—He may be President.

A Washington correspondent of the Commercial Gazette writes of Mr. Carlisle as follows:

Mr. Carlisle is one of the brainiest and most popular men connected with public affairs in Washington. His counsel is valued at the White House and through all the departments. He is regarded as a careful, safe and prudent adviser, who never loses his head, never colors his views from a personal standpoint—just such a man as the times demand for the position he holds. It is a high compliment to the fairness and ability with which he has exercised his office that human jealousy has not yet been able to develop in any quarter the slightest opposition. Some Kentuckians tell me that the people of that State as soon as they have the opportunity will transfer him to the other end of the Capitol, and it is not among the improbabilities that the people of the United States may take him up and transfer him to the other end of Pennsylvania avenue.

Commissioner's Sale.

Burlington, Haskell & Co., P.M.E.
vs. Judgment.
Hezakiah Davis, Defendant.

By virtue of a judgment in the above action for $197.80 debt, interest, and costs, will, on Monday, Dec. 21st 1885, between 10 p. m. and 4 p. m. at the Court House door in Louisa, Ky., sell at Public Auction to the highest bidder the following described property or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the plaintiff's debt, interest, and cost, the following described property to-wit: Beginning at two beeches on the bank of the creek thence across the line just above the house to a small beech marked on the bank of a small drain, just below where Anderson Boyd's built, thence crossing the drain and running to the top of the point to a small black oak thence running with the top of the point to a white oak corner of Jane Davis's survey; thence running with the line near the head of the branch, to three chestnuts, thence down the ridge toward the right hand fork of Georges Creek to the line between Anderson Boyd and Jane Davis; thence with that line down the creek to a stake under the bank of the creek near the road; thence running up the creek to the beginning containing fifty acres more or less. Said sale will be made upon a credit of 6 & 12 months and the purchaser will be required to give bond with good personal security.

BIG SANDY NEWS LOUISA, KY.

The boys have been enjoying the first skating of the season.

No services at the M. E. Church South last Sunday morning.

K. F. Prichard, of Catlettsburg, was in town several days last week.

Editor Marcum, of the Democrat, came up to attend the big meeting.

We now have only one meat store, Yimoon and Arnett having consolidated.

Peach Orchard coal is now selling at this place for seven cents per bushel delivered. Good!

John Thomas, of the river improvement corps, has returned from Lebanon, O.

One thousand dollars have been subscribed towards the building of a Baptist church in this place.

Quarterly meeting at the M. E. Church last Sunday. The communion services were held at night.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Thomas have returned from Ohio and are domiciled for the present at Judge Rice's.

Rev. Mr. Dickerson, of Wayne county, preached for the Baptists in the Masonic Hall last Sunday evening.

John Cahill, of New York city is visiting his relatives in Louisa and Owensville. Will remain during the winter.

The South Methodist Church has received a large number of Gospel Songs for use in church and Sunday School.

The coldest night of the season was Sunday night. The mercury dropped to the neighborhood of 0, and the wind howled like a fiend.

Messrs. George M. Johnson, of Mason co., W. Va., and John E. Johnson, of Charleston, W. Va., are visiting their uncle, G. F. Johnson.

Capt. Allen and men were in town Monday en route for home, work on the Caines' creek and Brown wells have temporarily closed.

By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that we are to have a new undertaker in Louisa. Can he mean anything personal by setting up so near two physicians?

On the last night of the Baptist meeting the pulpit was handsomely decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. At the commencement of his sermon Brother Jolly alluded in beautiful terms to the compliment.

To OUR CUSTOMERS who have been running accounts with us.—We are anxious to get all accounts settled up by the first of January, as we expect to make some change in our business at that time.

SNYDER BROS.

Revs. W. T. Jolly and J. K. Nunnally left Louisa Saturday morning for their respective homes, delighted with the success which crowned their efforts here, and carrying with them the good wishes of our people.

Wm. Vanderbilt, the richest man in the world, died of apoplexy at his home in New York, the 8th inst.

Since he assumed the office of Collector Gen. James Robinson has collected over a million of dollars in this district.

The Frank Preston went down last Friday night, having on board one hundred and ten 'moonshiners' and witnesses, and heavily loaded with produce. She transferred her passengers and freight at Catlettsburg to the Ingomar, which boat carried them to Cincinnati. Capt. M. Freese went along in command.

Our citizens were quite liberal in their contributions toward defraying the expenses incurred by our Baptist brethren during their recent protracted meeting. After paying the sexton a liberal compensation for his labors the remainder of the church collection was turned over to the South Methodist Church to pay for coal and oil.

A CARD.

We take this opportunity to thank the good people of Louisa for their kind reception and interest in us while in their midst. Also the brethren of the Methodist Church South for the use of their house, and the Big Sandy News and Mr. Sullivan, the ferryman, for favors.

W. T. JOLLY.
Dec. 5th. J. K. NUNNELLY.

A cold wave struck this vicinity last Friday night, lowering the temperature several degrees in as many minutes. The cold increased until Sunday night when it culminated in the coldest night of the season. Monday night the mercury rose several degrees, and toward morning a light rain fell, freezing as it came, so that by morning pedestrianism was an exceedingly dangerous business.

At the close of the services Friday night the Baptist Church held a business meeting, at which time the following resolution was presented to the church and unanimously adopted by a rising vote: RESOLVED, That we, the Baptist Church of Louisa, acknowledge our gratitude to the M. E. Church, South, of Louisa, for the use of their house during our meeting, and that we hereby tender a hearty vote of thanks for the same.

The following was also unanimously adopted by the large and attentive congregation: RESOLVED, That we, the citizens of Louisa and vicinity, irrespective of denominational belief or preference, hereby tender to Revs. W. T. Jolly and J. K. Nunnally our thanks for their able and successful labors among us during this series of meetings.

Tone up the system by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It will make you feel like a new person. Thousands have found health and relief from suffering, by the use of this great blood purifier, when all other means failed.

A. CARD TO LADIES.

A lady who suffered for years, and who was treated by the most noted physicians in America without relief, was given a simple remedy by a Russian nurse which permanently restored her to health. To all her sex, she now offers to send free the recipe, with full instructions for making the medicine your-self at home, without expense. If you are suffering with any form of female disease, do not throw away time and money on doctors' patent medicines, but inclose me a stamped envelope (addressed to your-self), and I will give a free cure.

For Instant Use

As a reliable remedy, in cases of Croup, Whooping Cough, or sudden Colds, and for the prompt relief and cure of throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes: "I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy for home use. I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults." John H. Stoddard, Petersburg, Va., writes: "I have never found a medicine equal to

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral

for the prompt relief of throat and lung diseases peculiar to children. I consider it an absolute cure for all such affections, and am never without it in the house." Mrs. L. E. Hermon, 187 Mercer st., Jersey City, writes: "I have always found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral useful in my family." B. T. Johnson, Mt. Savage, Md., writes: "For the speedy cure of sudden Colds, and for the relief of children afflicted with Croup, I have never found anything equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.
It is the most potent of all the remedies I have ever used." W. H. Slicker, Terra Haute, Ind., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured my wife of a severe lung affection, supposed to be Quiek Consumption. We now regard the Pectoral as a household necessity." E. M. Breckenridge, Brainerd, Minn., writes: "I am subject to Bronchitis, and, wherever I go, am always sure to have a bottle of

with me. It is without a rival for the cure of bronchial affections."

Happiness

results from that true contentment which indicates perfect health of body and mind.
You may possess it, if you will purify and invigorate your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. E. M. Howard, Newport, N. H., writes: "I suffered for years with serolous humors. After using two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I

Found

great relief. It has entirely restored me to health." James French, Atchison, Kans., writes: "To all persons suffering from Liver Complaint, I would strongly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with a disease of the liver for nearly two years, when a friend advised me to take this medicine. It gave prompt relief, and has cured me." Mrs. H. M. Elder, 34 Dwight st., Boston, Mass., writes: "For several years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family. I never feel safe, even

At Home

without it. As a liver medicine and general purifier of the blood, it has no equal." Mrs. A. B. Allen, Winterport, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and finally became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

and commenced giving it to him. It surely worked wonders, for, in a short time, he was completely cured."
